Children's Foundation developing new programs

Christmas is over, but that doesn't mean it's time to stop giving.

"Every year at Christmas kids get a new coat, so that means there are a lot old coats floating around out there. I try to encourage parents to donate those old coats to us," said Victor Rientord, president of The Children's Foundation, Inc.

The Children's Foundation, a non-profit organization, was established in 1967 to help a Tecate (Mexico) orphanage. In 1982 it was discovered that the children in the orphanage were being mistreated and the Children's Foundation rescued 35 children who were returned to their families.

"There are no real orphans in Mexico," said Rientord. "Ninety-nine percent of the orphanages are U.S. funded and they are really places for displaced, low income children." Almost all of the orphans are children of single parents who couldn't afford to keep their children at home, but still have contact with them.

The Children's Foundation collects food and clothing for families in Mexico as well as local low income families.

"We don't need to leave the block to find needy families anymore," said Rientord, "so we're concentrating more on local needs. Working at home is where we belong."

The Children's Foundation also does counseling work with step families in the Lemon Grove, La Mesa and Spring Valley areas.

Rientord said that 70% of all families are in a blended family atmosphere where there are step-parents and step-brothers or sisters.

Rientord's wife, Marie, is a marriage and family counselor and she conducts a course in step-parenting that teaches step-parents how to deal with the stress and confusion of a blended family.

But, The Children's Foundation doesn't stop with the parents. "We also teach kids how to deal with being a member of a step family," he said. The Foundation currently offers courses that teach communication and function as support groups for children ages 9-14 and is looking for someone to teach a 15-17 year old group.

"The classes are closed in that we are not interested in babysitting," said Rientord. "The parents must be involved."

The classes are not free, he added. The Children's Foundation receives no funding from the government and must generate its own money to fund programs.

Another program in the works is one for grandparents who are raising children. "These are not the same grandkids as 20 years ago," Rientord said. "These kids are born addicted to drugs and have parents who are drug addicts. We hope to provide the grandparents raising these kids a way to cope."

Junior Padres Club promotion set for Kobey's Swap meet, January 7

San Diego Padres' first baseman Rob Nelson, infielder Bip Roberts, catcher Mark Parent, and pitchers Mark Grant and Craig Lefferts will team-up to meet fans and autograph free photos at Kobey's Swap Meet at the Sports Arena, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sundays, Jan. 7 & Feb. 4.

Every year prior to spring training, the Padres Baseball Club assembles a cast of players and announcers to promote the "Coca Cola Junior Padres Club"—an association of youngsters 14 and under eligible to attend games at extremely reduced rates.

A San Diego tradition, the roaming caravans travel to malls and other locations such as Kobey's, where players meet with fans, sign autographs, give away prizes and sell club memberships.

This year eligible members may purchase the package of six general admission seat tickets for $6. Each ticket will also have a value of $4 towards the purchase of an upgraded ticket for the field, plaza, loge, press or upper reserve levels during every scheduled game at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium. Junior Padres Club members also receive a starter set of baseball cards and three club newsletters.

For further information, phone Jon Bayani at 283-7294. Players appearances are subject to availability.

Kobey's Swap Meet is open 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Home delivery meals program is beneficiary of fundraising efforts

Imperial Savings Lemon Grove office and Investment affiliate First Imperial Investors sponsored a successful fundraising drive for the Lemon Grove Senior Home Delivery Meals program. According to Mr. Richard Rowley of the Senior Nutrition Board, this local program provides low cost meals at home for seniors who cannot come to the regularly scheduled meals at the new Senior Center located on Mount Vernon St.

Marty Spuehler, manager of the Lemon Grove Office, says that "over 150 tickets were sold to Tuesday's showing of 'It's a Wonderful Life', starring Jimmy Stewart. These sales as well as donations from local businesses brought the total proceeds to $374.00!

Spuehler offered a special thank-you to Blake Baxter of First Imperial Investors Services for his donation of a gas barbeque and a telephone as door prizes. United Express Airlines also contributed ten 50% off coupons for California and Arizona flights.

More thank-yous go to all of the businesses who so graciously contributed to this year's fund drive: J&D Bros Auto repair, Top Hat Catering, A.Aaron Lock and Key, Mr. Health Inc., Len's of Lemon Grove, Salmagundi Arts and Crafts, Mr. Anthony Battalia, and Mr. George Varela, according to Spuehler, who said it "was a great success."

The Right to Know

Californians are blessed with a "Right to Know" law.

The Brown Act, oversimplified, says that no law-making body in the state shall hold meetings without giving the public due notice.

Does the Act work? Probably most of the time.

A sampling of what has been happening is in Lassen County, where a jury is presently deciding whether the County Supervisor, who allegedly held a closed meeting, was in violation of the Ralph M. Brown Open Meeting Act.

Knowingly closing a meeting which is required to be open under terms of the Brown Act is a misdemeanor. If convicted, each of the defendants could be sentenced to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine. The San Jose Mercury News charged that the five supervisors had held closed meetings at which a county employee was granted a raise and two new automobiles were purchased—all at taxpayer expense.

In August, visiting Modoc County Superior Court Judge Robert Barclay defied a motion to dismiss the case, thereby insuring a trial yet to be heard.

In another instance, the San Jose Mercury News was awarded $120,000 in a Public Act victory from the state Fair Political Practices Commission for legal fee expenses against the commission over a 15-month period.

The San Jose newspaper alleged that the FPPC, which is the state's political watchdog agency, intended to destroy certain files rather than make them public.

In dispositions taken earlier this year, FPPC employees testified that they were instructed not to disclose material that could prove embarrassing to the agency.

FPPC settled the litigation shortly thereafter.

In making the fee award, Sacramento Superior Court Judge Ronald Rubie said the newspaper's suit "conferred a substantial benefit to the general public."

Earlier, the Mercury News was awarded $11,000 for attorney fees and costs from the Fremont Unified School District after officials of the district had refused to disclose the information regarding secret deals with builders and landowners who had sued the district over a development fees ordinance.

Alameda Superior Court Judge Richard A. Hodge ordered the information made public and it was learned that in the prior 14 months the school district had returned $475,329 to six developers who claimed the district had overcharged them when they were building homes in Fremont.

The district had previously refused to make the information public so as not to tip off 11 other developers who had filed lawsuits against the district.

Among other Brown Act suits was the City Council of the City of Los Altos which fired all five members of its Citizen Financial Advisory Committee following "apparent" violations of the Brown Act.

All were charged with having met at the home of the committee's chairman privately with no prior notice. Later, four of them were accused by the council of having met again in a secret meeting. "It was just an oversight," one of the members testified.

This is only a sample of some of the secret meetings uncovered during the year. These are offered to let the public know the Brown Act is still working.

Christmas Eve Swim

On my way home from work on this special day, I had a feeling of despair. Was it because I had to work for awhile that morning on my birthday, December 23, or was it from fighting the icy, slippery roads? The cold and snowy Minnesota weather was finally getting me down.

Upon arriving home I announced to my wife and our three lovely daughters, "Hey gang! Pack your clothes, we're heading for sunshine. You'd better pack up all the Christmas gifts from under the tree and take them along too."

"Oh, and be sure to take along your swim suits, as I can promise you we will be swimming in the ocean on Christmas Eve," I added.

The girls were so excited they packed without any questions and within an hour we were on the road to Florida. None of our family had ever been south in the winter, so the trip, even with such short notice, was a thrill for all.

To keep my promise I had to drive long and hard as I was finding out how far it really was from Minnesota to Florida. We did arrive in Tampa early Christmas eve and were lucky to rent a nice cabin right on the beach without advance reservations.

As soon as the car was unloaded, I shouted, "Last one in the water is an old Swede from Minnesota." All our girls were blond headed Swedes, but they still raced to see who would be first. My wife was last in as she was a little scared of the ocean. The thought of sharks and swimming in salt water, especially in December, was a whole new experience for all of us.

After a long fun-time swim I yelled, "I'm starved. Let's eat, then we'll open our Christmas presents." After a vote was taken we all agreed,

"MacDonald's!" So for our Christmas Eve dinner we had hamburgers and fries.

On the way back to the cabin, Patty, our youngest daughter tearfully proclaimed, "We don't have a Christmas tree to put the presents under."

I realized that something had to be done fast. "Don't worry honey, we'll find one." That was easier said than done as it was Christmas Eve and there weren't many places open, besides all the trees had already been sold.

As we drove by an all night drug store, Patty hollered, "There's one! There's one!" I slammed on the brakes.

We all agreed, "There are no Christmas trees anywhere." Patty jumped out of the car and ran up to the drug store window pointing to a display in the window with a cardboard tree. "That's one right there."

I went in with Patty and talked the clerk out of the make-believe tree. After I explained our situation and by having my cute little daughter tugging at my pant leg, who could refuse?

So back to the cabin we went. We piled all the gifts around the little cardboard tree and then after a short "Thank You God" all the presents were opened.

I had kept my promise to my little family that we would swim in the ocean on Christmas Eve and spend the holiday in a nice warm climate for a change.

Our sweet little Patty confessed, "This is the best Christmas ever."

We all said "Amen" to that. The good Lord had blessed our happy family with a safe journey to the sunshine country, proving that family love can prevail, even away from home on Christmas, as long as they are all together.

Couch Potato Football

Football widows take heart. The good news is, it's almost over. Only the bowl games, the NFL Playoffs, League Championships, Super Bowl XXIV and the Pro Bowl are left.

The bad news is, 18 of those games will be played in the next three days.

And hard nosed, couch potato football watchers have been known to try to see a little of the action in each of the games. With satellite dishes and cable hook-ups, viewing parts of all 18 games is not only possible, it's downright likely.

The best bet is to get him out of the house and send him, off to the the Holiday Bowl. Let him watch at least one game in person. Get him out in the fresh air.

As a matter of fact, why not make it a twosome. Watch at least one game with him. He needs the exercise and you could do with a night out.

The Holiday Bowl pits Penn State against Brigham Young in San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium Friday at 5 p.m. It should be a rip-roaring barn burner, but all Holiday Bowl games are played like that. You can look it up.

You can yell and cheer and share a friendly beer and enjoy college football up close and personal. The exuberance of cheer leaders urging more of the roar of the crowd will get your blood pounding and your heart beating in rhythm to heavy rock.

And it will probably give him the only exercise he'll get over the following 48 hours as he sits through the rest of the weekend schedule.

On Saturday action starts with a rebroadcast of the Holiday Bowl, but that's just for starters.

Healthy resolutions make for a happier New Year in 1990

Lose 20 pounds. Find a new, exciting job. Call home more often. Save $5,000. Stop smoking. Learn to relax.

Sound like a five year plan? According to Allan Adler, M.D., Executive Medical Director of Alvarado Parkway Institute, this is just one example of a typical list of New Year's resolutions. Though resolutions are meant to be constructive devices used in order to obtain goals, Adler says that they are often quite the opposite.

"Most people suffer from the 'Great Expectations' syndrome of the New Year's resolution," says Adler. "We often create problems for ourselves by making resolutions that are bound to be broken, because they are either unrealistic or poorly defined. This pattern leads to a lot of negative feelings like guilt, feelings of inadequacy and self-recrimination."

To help resolution setters avoid these problems, API has developed a Healthy Resolutions Tip Sheet, which can be obtained free of charge by calling API.

Somewhere out there in television land, just waiting to be tuned in, are the Freedom (Washington 7-4 vs Florida 7-3), Gator (West Virginia 8-2-1 vs Clemson 9-2), John Hancock (Pittsburgh 6-3-1 vs Texas A&M 7-3) and the Peach (Georgia 6-4 vs Syracuse 6-4) Bowl games.

If you think that's enough, forget it. You're only just beginning. The Copper Bowl (matching North Carolina 7-4 against Arizona also 7-4) is the only collegiate game slated for Sunday.

But don't get your hopes up over nut 'n honey. A pair of wild card games will kick off the NFL playoffs in pro-telecast style. One early, the other late.

Then comes New Year's Day and seven bowl games, all of them available somewhere on the tube. We'll have the Hall of Fame game, the Florida Citrus game and the Fiesta Bowl warming things up for the big four of Bowldom.

The main event of bowling gives us the Cotton Bowl from Dallas, the Sugar Bowl from New Orleans, the Granddaddy of all bowl games, the Rose Bowl from Pasadena and, as our eyes grow dim from watching and our ears grow sore from the verbiage assault, under the lights of Miami, we get Colorado (11-0) vs Notre Dame (11-1) in the Orange Bowl.

Heaven be praised, the college football season will finally draw to a close. Then all we have left will be the NFL divisional double-header playoffs on Jan. 6-7, the AFC and NFC Championship games on Jan. 14, Super Bowl XXIV from New Orleans on Jan. 28 and the Pro Bowl from Honolulu on Feb. 4.

That's the end. So help me.

"Resolutions can be productive," says Adler, "if handled in the right way." Here are a few of the tips:

- Set realistic goals and evaluate them, instead of treating your resolutions as a wish list.

- Define your goals. A major source of failed resolutions is a poorly defined goal, like "find a new, exciting job."

- Create an action plan with a definite time-line. Too many people make resolutions that are workable, but that's as far as it goes. A time-line is necessary to avoid both procrastination and anxiety.

- Don't criticize yourself if you get side-tracked.

- Don't be afraid to abandon your resolution or modify it if it doesn't work out. Healthy goal-chasing means constantly evaluating what it is you are trying to achieve.

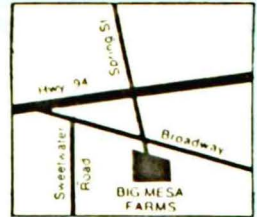

Copies of the complete Healthy Resolutions Tip Sheet can be obtained by calling API at 465-4411.
